ITALIAN LUXURY HOME FRAGRANCES

The first perfumery workshops of the Western world arose in Italy during the Middle Ages.

At that time, the country was divided into many small states and independent towns. All of them hosted plenty of abbeys and monasteries with their botanical gardens, where friars and nuns used to grow plants for herbal ointments, syrups, and other treatments. Convents also developed remedies to scent the persons and their clothes, like scented potpourri and perfumed waters.

During the Renaissance, the art of perfumery spread from the convents to the courts. Florence above all, but also Rome, Venice and Mantua, were the capital cities of the European culture, and the sophisticated Italian ladies from Este, Gonzaga, Sforza and Medici families dictated the rules of taste in the whole of Europe.

In 1533 Caterina de Medici, aged 14, married the future king of France, the Duke of Orléans, who was 14 as well. Paris was fascinated by this young Florentine lady with a such a special taste for clothes and accessories. Living in France, Caterina introduced some comforts she was used to, including the fine scents developed by her personal perfumer Renato Bianco (renamed René le Florentin); the whole Court fell in love with this fragranced habit, giving impulse to the development of a French perfumery.

At the end of the 16th century, at the very beginning of the Baroque Age, Florence was proud to have taught the French an art that the city had been already knowing for centuries; an art that it was deemed to preserve and improve never forgetting its tradition.

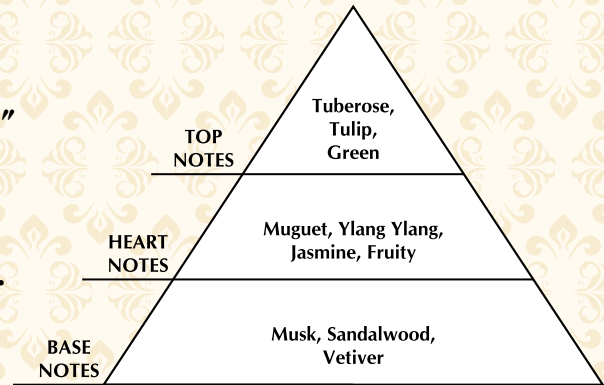

Graziani, candlemakers in Tuscany since 1805, have discovered some ancient recipes for room fragrances dating back to the Baroque Age, have revitalized them and will disclose them step by step: hence the name of this luxury collection: BAROCCO FIORENTINO.
